

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

opposite of a sale. Sears v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 442. The statute, specifying only the seller, by implication excludes the purchaser. State v. Rand, 51 N. H. 361. Similarly, a thief is not an accomplice of the receiver of his stolen goods. Birdsong v. State, 120 Ga. 850. A girl is not punishable as a party to her own seduction. Regina v. Tyrrell, [1894] 1 Q. B. 710. Nor is one accepting aid to escape from jail an accomplice of the person who furnishes it. State v. Duff, 122 N. W. 829 (Ia.). But in fact the buyer is a vital party to the sale. His action causes a breach of the law as surely as though he hired another to stab his enemy. These cases are properly explained as an exception to general principles based on public policy. The protection of the drinker intended by the statute would be nullified by his punishment. The state's most potent witnesses in liquor cases would be silenced through dread of conviction.

DAMAGES — MEASURE OF DAMAGES — CONVERSION OF STOCK. — The defendants converted the plaintiff's stock, then worth $45,125, which they were carrying for him on a margin. The stock declined before the plaintiff learned of the conversion. Within a reasonable time thereafter in which to replace the stock, its highest market price was $26,625. The plaintiff still owed at the time of the trial $15,000 on his loan. Held, that the plaintiff is entitled to $45,125 less $15,000. McIntyre v. Whitney, 43 N. Y. L. J. 1809 (N. Y., App. Div., July, 1910).

Damages in actions for conversion should fully indemnify the plaintiff and at the same time prevent the defendant from profiting by his wrongdoing. Suydam v. Jenkins, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 614. The New York rule of damages for the conversion of stock is ordinarily its highest market price within a reasonable time in which the plaintiff might replace the stock after discovering the conversion. Wright v. Bank of the Metropolis, 110 N. Y. 237. But the purpose of this rule is to indemnify the plaintiff when the value at the time of conversion would fail to do so, as when the market rises after the tort. Barber v. Ellingwood, 137 N. Y. App. Div. 704. The court in the principal case thus limits its application, and holds that at least the value at the time of conversion, with interest, may always be recovered. The rule may result in compensating the plaintiff unduly, for the fact that he had not discovered the conversion while the market was high is conclusive that he did not then wish to sell. But the decision is reasonable, for the other rule would give the tort-feasor the profits of the transaction and so put a premium upon misappropriations by brokers. Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425.

DAMAGES — MITIGATION OF DAMAGES — BENEFIT TO PLAINTIFF. — The defendant town appropriated the plaintiff's property for highway purposes, without taking proper legal steps to condemn. The plaintiff brought trespass, and the defendant sought a reduction of damages by reason of the benefit which the plaintiff would derive from the highway. Both parties regarded the appropriation as permanent. Held, that the plaintiff may recover the full value of the land. Pinney v. Town of Winchester, 76 Atl. 994 (Conn.).

If the plaintiff's land had been properly condemned, damages would have been assessed under the Connecticut rule in eminent domain, allowing a set-off for special benefits to the remaining land. Trinity College v. City of Hartford, 32 Conn. 452. If the authority to condemn is not strictly pursued, the person acting under color of it becomes a trespasser, liable in some jurisdictions to exemplary damages. Stewart v. Wallace, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 344; Anderson, etc. R. Co. v. Kernalde, 54 Ind. 314. The principal case is right in refusing to apply the rule in eminent domain to a clear case of trespass. The act is unlawful, and benefits imposed upon the owner cannot be applied to reduce damages. Turner v. Rising Sun & Laughery Turnpike Co., 71 Ind. 547. The usual rule is to award damages for the trespass, and to compel the defendant to gain title